

Amgen Australia Donations

Makes donations to the healthcare and non-healthcare community to further educational, scientific, or other charitable purposes.

1. Healthcare Donations

As part of Amgen's mission to serve patients, Amgen Australia makes donations to qualified members of the Australian healthcare community and patient organisations for the following purposes:

- The support of science, technology, medicine, healthcare or education
- Education of the public on disease states, medical conditions, science or technology
- In furtherance of other genuine philanthropic and charitable purposes that are consistent with Amgen's scientific and disease interests.

Types of donations that are supported by Amgen Australia include, but are not limited to the support of science, technology, medicine, healthcare or education for educational activities, including, but not limited to,

- Fellowship programs, endowed professorships, scholarships, and third party medical education programs
- Public education programs, disease awareness campaigns, patient assistance programs
- Patient advocacy programs
- Other giving or funding to support programs and initiatives consistent with the purposes set forth above, including charitable donations such as payments for fundraising events.

Donations are a contribution, grant, or payment in cash or in kind, made by Amgen to a not-for-profit and/or tax-exempt organisation without expectation of something in return other than customary donor recognition of incidental value.

Amgen Australia may make donations only to qualified recipients to further an educational, scientific or other charitable purpose.

Qualified recipients do not include individuals, and include only the following types of entities:

- Healthcare institutions
- Universities
- Patient organisations
- Professional, scientific or medical societies
- Scientific or medical trade associations
- Non-healthcare institutions.
- All such recipients must be tax exempt organisations, not-for-profit organisations, accredited by tax authority as non-profit institutions eligible to receive donations.

2. Non-Healthcare Donations

Amgen Australia makes donations to qualified charitable organisations that support the community and environment in which they operate.

Donations are a contribution, grant, or payment in cash or in kind, made by Amgen to a not-for-profit and/or tax-exempt organisation without expectation of something in return other than customary donor recognition of incidental value.

Amgen Australia may make donations only to qualified recipients, to further an educational, scientific or other charitable purpose.

If the donation request involves a member of the Australian healthcare community (any member of the medical, dental, pharmacy or nursing professions or any other person who in the course of his or her professional activities may prescribe, recommend, influence or arrange the purchase, supply, or administration of an Amgen product) on behalf of a Healthcare Institution or Patient Organisation, please use the application procedure for healthcare related donations.

Please complete the application process at least sixty (60) days prior to the required donation date.
